

MORALITY

Canadians open-minded on relationships and sexual behaviour, but not drugs

Most see abortion, euthanasia and stem-cell research as morally acceptable.

[VANCOUVER – Dec. 20, 2007] – People in Canada have generally liberal views on a wide range of social practices, a new Angus Reid Strategies poll has found.

In terms of relationships, the online survey of a representative national sample found that a vast majority of Canadians (81%) sees pre-marital sex as being morally acceptable, while 77 per cent feel the same way about having a baby outside marriage, and 83 per cent present no moral objection to divorce.

Fifty-nine per cent of respondents also believe sexual relations between people of the same sex should not be considered immoral.

However, Canadians are less tolerant about cheating. Three-in-four respondents (76%) believe it is immoral for married men or women to have an affair. An overwhelming 84 per cent think polygamy—whereby one husband has more than one wife at the same time—is also morally wrong.

In topics that deal with science and health, the poll found that at least 61 per cent of respondents think abortion and doctor-assisted suicide are morally acceptable practices. Almost two-thirds (64%) feel the same way about medical research with stem cells obtained from human embryos. Almost all respondents (93%) have no moral qualm with contraception methods.

Cloning, however, is a whole different story. More than half of respondents (56%) think cloning animals is morally wrong, and the number is much higher (78%) when it comes to cloning human beings.

KEY FINDINGS

- » Abortion and euthanasia morally acceptable for at least 61%
- » 93% accept contraception methods
- » 77% see no moral wrongdoing in having a baby outside marriage
- » Pre-marital sex OK for 81%
- » 76% think married women or men having an affair is morally wrong
- » 59% believe same-sex relations are morally acceptable

Full topline results are at the end of this release.

From October 11 to 12, 2007, Angus Reid Strategies conducted an online survey among a randomly selected, representative sample of 1,004 adult Canadians. The margin of error for the total sample is +/- 3.1 %, 19 times out of 20. The results have been statistically weighted according to the most current education, age, gender and region Census data to ensure a sample representative of the entire adult population of Canada. Discrepancies in or between totals are due to rounding.

On animal rights, Canadians are clearly divided. While 47 per cent of respondents think medical testing on animals is morally acceptable, 47 per cent disagree. As for buying and wearing clothing made of animal fur, a majority (51%) takes no issue with it, but 36 per cent do.

The survey also found that most Canadians (61%) regard gambling as morally acceptable. On the contrary, the use of illegal drugs is condemned by the majority (68%) along with suicide (62%), prostitution (55%) and pornography (54%). Pedophilia is seen as morally acceptable by only one per cent of respondents.

The opinions of men and women differ significantly. Most notably, more men (64%) than women (58%) think abortion is morally acceptable. Conversely, more women (88%) than men (78%) express no moral objections to divorce. A wider gender gap is found in the acceptance of medical testing on animals (men: 57%, women: 27%); pornography (men: 51%, women: 25%), and prostitution (men: 48%, women: 25%).

As for regional differences, more people in Manitoba and Saskatchewan (73%), and Quebec (69%), think euthanasia is morally acceptable than anywhere else in Canada. Alberta holds the lowest number of people (69%) who have no issue with divorce—and also the highest number of respondents who think pornography is morally acceptable (43%). In British Columbia, almost two-in-five respondents (38%) decry euthanasia.

Conservative and Conservative-leaning voters are evidently the most comfortable with wearing and buying fur clothing (64%), imposing the death penalty (61%), and performing medical tests on animals (55%). They also hold the highest number of opponents to divorce (18%), euthanasia (33%), having a baby outside marriage (27%), same-sex relations (43%), suicide (71%), and the use of illegal drugs (75%).

Liberal and Liberal-leaning voters are more inclined to see animal cloning (34%) and human cloning (16%) as morally acceptable; and to consider spouses cheating on each other as morally wrong (81%). Liberals also condemn the use of illegal drugs (71%).
